How does our dedication to “success” (he who dies with the most toys wins) fuel our society and Wall Street in particular? Is it ethical or even practical for top executives to be paid 350 - 500 times their average employee? Is the primary responsibility to maximize profits for shareholders? Why are hedge-fund managers taxed at preferable lower rates? Should Wall Street CEOs be “punished” for unethical behavior with $50 million bonuses? Come join four top executives and an extremely knowledgeable educator as they dissect one of the most important ethical dilemmas of our current times: the growing divide between the 1% and the 99%.
