Coach Rush has been the head football coach at City College of San Francisco since 1977 and director of athletics since 1989. He has an unparalleled winning record from 1992 to 2012: 229 wins and 25 losses for a .902 winning percentage with 7 National Championships. Rush was named National Coach of the Year in 1999 and 2001.

Norm Chow | Head Football Coach, University of Hawai‘i
The first Asian-American head coach of a major college football program, Chow took over the program at UH Mānoa in 2012 after spending nearly 40 years coaching collegiately and in the National Football League. Considered one of the top offensive minds in the game, the Pālolo native has coached three Heisman Trophy winners, six NFL first-round draft pick quarterbacks, and was part of three national championship teams. A graduate of Punahou School, Chow holds bachelor’s and master’s degrees from the University of Utah and an Ed.D. from Brigham Young University.

Ben Jay | Athletic Director, University of Hawai‘i
Ben Jay became UH Mānoa’s 19th athletics director in January 2013, following a six-year tenure as senior associate athletics director for finance and operations at Ohio State University. Prior to OSU, Jay spent 13 years as the then-Pac-10 Conference’s associate commissioner for business and finance and five years as assistant athletics director for business and finance at Fairfield University in Connecticut. Jay was also general manager for the Redwood Pioneers minor league baseball team. He holds a bachelor’s degree in accounting and a master’s degree in athletics administration from Ohio State.

Brett Jones | Defensive Backfield Coach, San Francisco City College
Jones began his football career with Coach George Rush at the City College of San Francisco in 2002. He later earned a scholarship at Kansas State University in 2004, but a serious injury kept him from continuing his football career at the professional level. After working in Manhattan, Kansas as a personal trainer for some time, Jones is now the defensive back coach, alongside George Rush, at City College of San Francisco.
